

Increasing Volume Screener

Are you tired of reading Berkshire-Hathaway 13F reports, only to find that the stock prices have risen several dollars because of the buying activity during the prior quarter? This screener may be for you – we use it as an early-warning system to detect position building.

Compares the last few days trading volume to the several days before. If the current average volume is greater than previous average volume AND the average prices are HIGHER, this indicates that buyers are accumulating the stock.

You can select the percentage to show only stocks with volume increases above that cutoff. All stocks reported will have higher average prices in the current period.